The starting point for this book was in two sessions on water and hydraulics in medieval Iberia at the 20th International Medieval Congress, held in Leeds in 2013. The aim of this compilation of studies is to provide a glimpse into the rich complexity of approaches to water in medieval and post-medieval Spain. Given the historical circumstances, environments as different as the Muslim state of al-Andalus and the domains of the Catholic rulers are all examined in the papers that make up this book.
Personal Agency at the Swedish Age of Greatness 1560–1720

This study provides fresh insights into the state-building process in Sweden. During this transitional period, many far-reaching administrative reforms were carried out, and the Swedish state developed into a prime example of the “power-state”. In early modern studies, agency has long remained in the shadow of the study of structures and institutions. State building in Sweden was a more diversified and personalized process than has previously been assumed. Numerous individuals were also important actors in the process.

STUDI STORICO-EPIGRAFICI SUL LAZIO ANTICO II

Nel 1996 venne pubblicato a cura di chi scrive il volume collettivo Studi storico-epigrafici sul Lazio antico. In esso erano raccolti sette contributi, volti ad evidenziare le numerose problematiche emerse durante la fase di preparazione di un nuovo corpus. Nel presente volume si trovano ulteriori contributi, molti dei quali hanno anche lo scopo di alleggerire la futura edizione del CIL, per esempio offrendo una documentazione completa delle iscrizioni aliene di alcuni centri antichi, accompagnata da un completo corredo fotografico.

The Corpus of Indus Seals and Inscriptions (CISI) has as its purpose to make available for research, in as good images as possible, all seals and inscriptions relating to the Indus Civilization, which flourished in Pakistan and northwestern India c. 2600–1900 BCE. This material is fundamental for the research of the poorly understood script, language, and religion of the Indus Civilization, and a major outlet for its art. The seals and other types of inscribed artefacts are important also for the study of the Harappan social, political and economic organization, including administrative practices, external cultural contacts, internal trade and various techniques, such as seal carving.
Arctos 52 includes the following articles, among others: Mireille Corbier, Nouvelle lecture d’une inscription de Mâcon; Gianluca de Martino, A multicultural Approach to the Study of the Cult of Hera in Poseidonia/Paestum; Richard Ducan-Jones, The Antonine Plague Revisited; Hilla Halla-aho, Left-dislocation, Subordinate Clauses and the Stylistic Difference between Plautus and Terence; George Hollenback, The Problems in the Vitruvian Hodometer Revisited.

TRANSNATIONAL DEATH

Transnational Death brings together eleven cutting-edge articles from the emerging field of transnational death studies. The collection highlights European, Asian, North American, and Middle Eastern perspectives, and reflects on people’s changing experiences with death in the context of migration over time. The collection provides new insights on issues including identity and belonging, community reciprocity, transnational communication, and spaces of mourning and commemoration.

Matthias Alexander Castrén (1813–1852) was by far the most significant Finnish linguist of the 19th century. In addition to being a linguist he was also a multidisciplinary scholar, equally versatile in the fields of ethnography, folklore, mythology, archaeology, history and human geography. This two-part volume contains the reports and previously unpublished diaries written by Castrén in Finnish Lapland in 1838, Finnish and Russian Karelia in 1839, Finnish Lapland and Arctic Russia in 1841–1844, and in Siberia in 1845–1849. The introductory article contextualizes them in the intellectual and scholarly environment of the time.
“HARD IT IS TO STIR MY TONGUE” —

Raiding the Otherworld for the Elixir of Poetry

Where does poetic inspiration come from? This has been a puzzle for as long as poetry has been around. This book surveys some of the ways poets have thought of their craft, focusing particularly on medieval sources which see the Otherworld as a fastness of poetic inspiration, whence it has to be raided. Clive Tolley is a docent in the folkloristics department of the University of Turku in Finland, specialising in comparative mythology.

Handwritten Newspapers

An Alternative Medium during the Early Modern and Modern Periods

This book is focusing on handwritten newspapers as an alternative medium from a wide interdisciplinary and international perspective. The primary focus is on handwritten newspapers as a social practice. The case studies contextualize the source materials in relation to political, cultural, literary, and economic history. From the 16th to the 20th centuries, handwritten newspapers changed from an expensive public commodity and a social gift for the elites to an internal or clandestine medium of communication for non-elite groups.

LINGUISTIC DIVERSITY RESEARCH AMONG SPEAKERS OF ISINDEBELE AND SINDEBELE IN SOUTH AFRICA

This volume is the result of a linguistic field excursion to South Africa in 2016. Area-specific academic traditions and practices differ from one area to another. Across different geographical spaces, we find separate research traditions, different kinds of available source material, and varying linguistic settings. Therefore, language documentation, descriptive linguistics, and language sociological approaches vary between research sites.

As skilled rhetoricians, the early Christian preachers knew that in order to reach the hearts of their listeners, they need to know their operational environment, and use a language familiar to their audience. In a way, a modern scholar trying to interpret these homilies meets the same challenge: in order to understand homilies delivered more than a thousand years ago, we need to try to understand their original context as well as possible. Articles in this volume explore the importance of context for early Christian homilies.

APPROHINGING LOVE

Theological and Philosophical Inquiries

This volume collects together articles, which engage a variety of themes related to human and divine love. The title of this book “apprehending love” employs the notion of apprehension and especially its medieval background. For example, Martin Luther built his understanding of justification around this concept, which, on the one hand, refers to intellectual comprehension but, on the other hand, means becoming one with the object itself. In faith, Christ becomes not only the outward object of our faith, but its proper subject.

ON THE LEGACY OF LUTHERANISM IN FINLAND

Societal Perspectives

This research analyses the societal legacy of Lutheranism in Finland. This volume addresses different societal areas which have been significantly influenced by Lutheranism, but also demonstrate how Lutheranism and its institutions have themselves adapted to society. As part of an ongoing religious turn in humanities and social sciences research, this book argues that it is necessary to take religion into greater account to more fully understand current societies and cultures.

ACTION, VALUE AND METAPHYSICS

Proceedings of the Philosophical Society of Finland Colloquium 2018

This colloquium represented in certain ways, a break from a long tradition. This time the objective was an open, general, and rigorously refereed conference in which philosophers could disseminate and discuss their best work. This collection is a result of open call for papers and presents a sample of current philosophical work in Finland, with topics ranging from collective responsibility to philosophy of action and from metaphysics to metaethics.

RESETTLED REFUGEES AND ASYLUM SEEKERS IN THE FINNISH HOUSING MARKET
Iraqi, Syrian and Eritrean experiences

In 2015 and 2016 Finland became one of the main net receivers of asylum seekers relative to its population size in Europe and the national reception system was put under severe stress. Housing is one of the key social issues for asylum seekers and refugees, but also for the receiving society in general. However, the question what goes on at the level of everyday reality as new asylum seekers enter the housing market remains largely unanswered in the Finnish context. Based on in depth interviews with nearly forty asylum seekers.

MUUTTOLIIKEBIBLIOGRAFIA – MIGRATION BIBLIOGRAPHY – MIGRATIONSBIBLIOGRAFI

This multidisciplinary bibliography comprises research on migration, integration, ethnic relations, and related subjects published between the late eighteenth century and the present. The studies included are related to migration from, to, or within Finland. A selection of studies on national minorities is also included. In addition, the bibliography contains an introductory chapter that outlines trends in Finnish migration research since 1970 and provides suggestions for future research themes.

TOWARDS A POSTSTRUCTURAL POLITICAL ECONOMY OF TOURISM

A critical sustainability perspective on destination development in the Finnish North

To increase sustainability in tourism destinations, tourism research has highlighted the need for collective economic agency in destination localities. To date, research has tended to draw on multiple, often contradicting, theoretical perspectives in an attempt to clarify how collective agency in tourism destinations should be best organized in order to foster social justice and ecological sustainability.

CULTURE, INSTITUTIONS AND POWER

Institutionalisation of cross-border co-operation as a municipal development strategy in Northern Finland

A predominant academic question is how and why the development paths of municipalities and regions take certain forms. Geographers and economists have investigated the dynamics of how local institutional conditions and their local mobilisation can affect development outcomes and how development is determined by “structural” forces such as state- and EU-based regulations and globalisation of the economy. Thus, the notion that historical sensitiveness and context-dependency are essential factors in local and regional development.

LIMITS OF LOCALISM

Institutional perspectives on communicativeness, neoliberalization and sustainability in Finnish spatial planning

Municipalities play an increasingly important role in spatial planning in Finland. During the last decades, planning powers have been transferred to the local level while deconstructing the mechanisms of top-down steering. Local communities and stakeholders are seen to counterbalance the circumscribed bureaucratic control of land use. This thesis analyzes the transformation of Finnish spatial planning with a focus on the relationship between public steering and market actors.

GEOGRAPHY MEETS ECOLOGY

Developing proxies to understand variations of stream biodiversity

Biodiversity patterns in streams have been shown to be structured by direct physical properties of the local habitat and by proxy features on the catchment and regional scales, but one problem has been related to moderate explanatory power using such traditional environmental variables. This study investigates biodiversity patterns in northern streams by introducing the use of geographical proxy variables of environmental features and dispersal.
